Rev. J. W. House left on Sunday night's train for Manitoba where he will superintend an Indian school for a couple of weeks before returning to Gleichen. He will have charge of two schools Gleichen and the Manitoba one and will spend two weeks every month at each school.

Thanksgiving Day was a quiet one in town since every hunter who had a gun left early in the morning for his favorite spot. All day Sunday cars from the west loaded with hunters passed through town for points east where they had heard there was good hunting for birds of all descriptions.

Miss B. Lester and P.O. Elliot Evans, both of Vulcan S.P.T.S., spent the weekend in town at the home of Mrs. G. W. Evans.

Miss M. Gilbert of Calgary spent the long weekend holiday in town visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Gilbert.

Mrs. L. Woods and children of Calgary are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Wood.

Mrs. G. Moneay, a former resident of this district but for some years past residing in California is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Monard.

The national cleanup of employed reports on male employees by National Selective Service located a total of 7,245 men not in good standing under mobilization regulations. These delinquents were among nearly 86,000 doubtful cases reported by patriotic employers.

The busy bee takes a hand in the war effort. We didn't think about it that way until we read on item tucked away in a department of agriculture bulletin. It appeared to be keepers to conserve every scrap of beeswax possible this coming winter. Do you know, beeswax is miscible with oils and fats, plays a prominent part in the manufacture of ointments and cerates for wounded. Castor is a pharmaceutical preparation for external application. Beeswax is also used in making casts, modelling profile maps of war, and candles.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Pifer of Portland, Oregon, spent a week or so in town visiting Mrs. Pifer's mother Mrs. Wm. Payne. While here they called on their old friends, of whom Mr. and Mrs. Pifer state there are not many left. Both are old timers of the district where they farmed for a time later moving to Calgary. About fifteen years ago they moved to Portland where they have resided since that time.

Miss Rosie Woods of Calgary spent the weekend visiting relative in town.

No man in his right mind ever set down to milk a cow on her left flank. So the Wartime Prices and Trade Board has been told in no uncertain terms following a recent advertisement in stating the national milk supply situation. A small thumbnail sketch of a cow being milked on the left side, illustrating the ads, drew protesting letters from scores of Alberta farmers. Mikemilk had their say too. "Anyway," said a harried board official. "They certainly read our ads!"

Don't forget this is fire prevention week, and don't forget to look into these dirty smoke pipes.

The mushrooming of Canada's chemical research and development, impelled by the needs of war, will make a thrilling chapter in the history of World War II; it will be the story of an astounding job by our scientists and industry. Starting practically at scratch in 1939, Canada "suddenly" completed 50 projects for explosive, chemical and shell-filling plants. Only nine of these plants were privately owned, the remainder owned by the people of Canada. The whole program entailed an expenditure of $150,000,000 on properties owned by the Dominion, excluding the $400,000 synthetic rubber plant. By the end of 1943 this somewhat small nation of ours contributed to victory by producing some 100,000,000 rounds of gun ammunition, grenades, mine, bombs, etc., and hundreds and hundreds of millions of small arms ammunition, and one high explosive are used on every fighting front.

On October 18th the Normal schools at Edmonton and Calgary will admit students to train for a teacher's War Emergency Certificate. The training continues until June 8, 1945. All young people who are willing to assist in carrying on the school of the province are invited to submit applications to the Department of Education. Deserving students with a good high school record of eight or more credits, financial assistance where the need for same can be established. This will take the form of a bursary, which is a gift—a loan; and is paid out of funds available under the Canadian Vocational Training Program. Requirements for admission are at least 10 high school credits with at least 10 standing in English and Social Studies. Another class of students having high school diplomas standing will open on January 3, 1945, and continue until March 29th. This is similar to the short-term course which opened on Sept. 11 and ends on Dec. 14th. All applications should be sent to the Registrar of the Department of Education.

WEDDING

John Lloyd Hamar son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Hamar of Gleichen, was married on September 11, to Miss Ida Blackwood of Halifax, in the United Church of that city by the Rev. G. W. Pether. The honeymoon was spent visiting the bride's sister, Mrs. H. Perret at Dartmouth, N.S., who held a reception for them.

JOE CITIZEN SAYS— Believe me, folks inflation's not a thing for just a passing thought. The juggling of the nation's bills to us from inflation's life is something to be thankful for and sure has helped to win the war. The thing is though—it's not too late to rock the good old ship of state. Inflation STILL could take hold—it is still uncontrolled, unregulated, and it's just common-sense to buy them in our own defence.

It can't be called a sacrifice—that bonds pay well there's no doubt. They drew a very nice percent on money waiting to be spent when Victory and Peace both won, some careless spending can be done.

In a short time he expects to leave for California and is contemplating going by air.

Harvesting is just about completed in the district. Here and there a combine may be seen now. Given a few more fine days like we have had for the past week the work will be finished.

If you really want to get a royal welcome and at the same time make a man feel happy beyond words go to the home in Calgary, call on Johnnie Guttrich who is in the Col. Belcher Hospital recovering from a wound in the hip. The writer called on him the other day and found him looking fine. Johnnie states he hopes to get home for Christmas. He says that within three hours after he received his wound he was in a hospital in England and the Red Cross have treated him magnificently and did not think they could do any more for him when they have done.

THE TINY MATCH

I'm just a little tiny match
That people carry 'round,
To light their cigarette or pipe
Then throw me on the ground.
My head is so very hard
Against the old stone wall,
And then I'm tossed with careless hand
No thought of where I fall.

Some scratch my head with finger nail
And think it's quite a lark
Then flip me in the sidewalk well
Where it is dry and dark.
At times I've had to stay there long
Till my head rung like a bell,
And then to pass the hours away
I flared and burned like "Hell".
I'm blamed for all the damage done
When I'm temper lost,
And not the guy that struck my head
Go carelessly where he tossed.
If my true value were appraised
By people whom I serve,
They'd find me such a useful type
Who from purpose does not swerve.
So if you wish me to behave,
I warn you here and now,
To use me in a thoughtful way
And I'll not start a row.
I'm just a little tiny match
That people carry 'round,
To serve them in a thousand ways,
So long as judgment's sound.

ANGLICAN CHURCH PREPARES TO MEET POST-WAR PROBLEMS

The Diocese of Calgary will face a rehabilitation problem of its own with the cessation of hostilities. Returning chaplains must be replaced in Diocesan work. Country parishes long vacant have to be re-manned. Clergy Houses must be set up in the scattered areas of the Diocese.

At present more than half of the parishes ministered to by mission clergy in this Diocese are without clergy. This condition, although it has created by the demands of war must be altered as speedily as circumstances permit.

These urgent needs of the church will call for funds. It is estimated that $50,000 will be the minimum requirement to meet the program for next five years. A committee of laymen appointed by the Bishop of Calgary is sending a call to all members and friends of the Anglican Church in this Diocese to lend their support to this effort. With this heartening news of victories for our cause in Europe this appeal has been appropriately named "Thanksgiving for Victory Campaign."

The Right Rev. H. R. Bagg, Bishop of Calgary will speak to his church family over the radio station CFCA at 10:15 o'clock each Tuesday evening in October; that is October 17th, 24th and 31st. All Anglicans will want to understand and share in these problems affecting their church's ministry in this Diocese.

The Quick and the Dead

Ordinarily, it is not difficult to distinguish between a dead animal and one that is alive. With plants it is different. Under conditions of severe drought, the grass in a meadow or lawn may look dead; but only a day or two after rain it is obviously very much alive. Seeds show no signs of life until they are provided with conditions favourable to germination, and sometimes they may be alive, but dormant, and refuse to germinate even under apparently favourable circumstances.

When harvest weather is fine and in the absence of damage by diseases or insects, field crop seeds are usually alive. This fall, harvesting conditions have been very bad in many districts, and frost has undoubtedly damaged a good deal of grain. Most farmers, therefore, will be wise to make a germination test of have one made.

Line Elevator company agents can provide printed cards giving detailed instructions for making tests at home. They will, also, accept samples of wheat, oats, barley, rye and flax for testing in our laboratory. First class equipment and a skilled staff are at your service. Official government tests are made for a nominal fee, at Plant Products Division Laboratories at Calgary, Saskatoon and Winnipeg.

For stands of grain are an invitation to weeds. Take no chances; but either make a test or have one made.

WHAT OF RUSSIA?

By R. P. MacLean
What of Russia? That is one of the questions asked most frequently since my return from Britain. That, naturally, was also one of the questions we asked most frequently in Britain. Here, then, are the impressions gathered from the asking of that question many times by myself and other members of the party. In the first place the people of Britain feel that the relationship between Britain and the Soviet are good. Better today than they have ever been before.

It is emphasized that Stalin is completely in our confidence, that he knows our plans to the smallest detail and is quite happy about them. He knows, too, that it is the air front from the west which has assisted his armies to a major degree in the drive which they have made. He knows that his armies would have had a much tougher time had not eighty per cent of the German fighting force been tied down in the west. He appreciates that our air offensive made the Germans make a major and serious decision; whether to try and stem our air offensive or to give adequate air support to the German armies on the Russian front. It is a significant commentary on the air offensive that they decided to place eight percent of their available air strength against it and leave their armies in Russia to do as best they could without sufficient air support.

Then, too, I am told that one of Stalin's most precious possessions is a stereoscope, supplied him by the British Air Ministry and a series of photographs showing German cities before and after our bombers have paid them a visit. They are a visual story of devastation, disrupted production organizations, wrecked plants and curtailed war production. They supply in some measure at least, one of the answers to why the Russian armies have rolled forward.

In Britain there was little concern over the announcement that was made that Russia had made itself into a commonwealth with seventeen separate and self-contained "Dominions". As one man pointed out this move was no mean compliment to the British Commonwealth, as apparently Russia had modeled its new setup along the lines of the British Commonwealth.

It is felt that the move was more an eternal one than an external one. Designed to encourage the people of the various states; a move to enhance fighting morale through the giving of more local pride to the various districts.

The Russians are realists and they realize realist of them all is Stalin, the British think. This fact gives them confidence in his attitude. They point out that not for nearly a decade has he ever varied his position. He has maintained throughout that he has no territorial ambitions, other than those which will ensure a safe Russia which can devote the coming quarter-century to development within its own borders.

The British are inclined to believe Stalin when he says that he has no expansionist policies. Being a realist, he appreciates that absorption of the Poles, the Rumanians and other peoples would give him nothing but continual headaches, and moreover, they have little that he needs or desires.

Russia, however, does believe that the Curzon line should be the boundary and who, excepting the Poles, would say that this is not correct. Certainly it was the British viewpoint in 1918.

The Russian attitude seems to be one of "Give us the Curzon line and let the Poles expand to the westward — go to Berlin." If this be so the Poles have an opportunity of obtaining a seacoast much greater than they possessed in 1939.

Perhaps one should feel a little sorry for the Poles, but their attitude has been an uncompromising one and it now seems certain that they must give way on certain points. In any discussion of this nature one permanent fact must be kept in mind. The future peace of the world depends entirely upon the continued friendliness and co-operation of Britain. (Continued on another page)

You hold the mortgage - You collect the interest

A Victory Bond is a mortgage on Canada: all of this country's resources guarantee payment of principal and interest. And the money you lend to Canada, when you buy Victory Bonds, is the safest investment you can make.

You can borrow on Victory Bonds for seasonal farm requirements or any bank will pay cash for your bonds should you need cash at any time.

Money is a vital war weapon. Canada needs every dollar that every Canadian can save and lend... more than ever before. As the war increases in intensity, Canada's need for money increases, too. Our country's all-over borrowing needs are increased by over three hundred and twenty million dollars at this time. We must each be ready to lend again, and to lend more.

Thousands of small grains make a bushel of wheat. So with the money that Canada must borrow, from Canadians, to pay for the war small sums loaned by individuals mount up to billions. Lend all you can... money that small loans are unimportant. Put your savings into mortgages on Canada—marketable mortgages. You will be doing a worthwhile war job... and you will get your money back... with interest.

SHORT STORY—

Trial By Fire

By FAYE McGOVERN
McCure Newspaper Syndicate

The captain of the American freighter spoke grimly. "This cargo of food, and medical supplies must reach Shin Lee. The entire province has been isolated by the enemy. Famine and disease are imminent. It's up to you, Stacy, to contact Mr. Mu—and no one else! Understand? He's the only man who will save this port is crawling with spies who will stop at nothing to get this material for themselves. Now, what is it you are to do?"

"Go to the Copper Kettle," replied First Mate Stacy. "Order a cup of American tea to identify myself, and wait for Mr. Mu."

The captain nodded. "Those were Mr. Mu's instructions. And the password—" "Checkmate."

A few moments later, clad as an inconspicuous tourist, Stacy made his way up a filthy street to where a tarnished copper kettle swung gently above a narrow, forbidding doorway. Orders were orders, but why the dickens did he have to be the goat? It wasn't his war. He ducked into the shadowy interior and seated himself glumly at a small, lacquered table. Instantly a Chinese servant stood beside him.

"American tea," Stacy said shortly. The Chinese bowed and vanished behind a sleazy curtain. Stacy glanced warily around, found himself completely alone. To all outward appearances it was just another shabby room. Doubtless merely a front for opium dens beyond. A sweet penetrating odor offended his nostrils. He frowned, then shrugged, drumming his fingers impatiently. Opium or incense, what difference did it make? Where was Mr. Mu?

The Chinese returned, set a steaming cup before him, bowed, and disappeared again. Stacy looked at the amber liquid with distaste. He hated tea. He glanced up as the curtain stirred, just in time to see a sinister, mummy-like face swiftly withdrawing.

"Stacy's scalp prickled. 'Holy cow! He was being watched. Better be careful. No telling who the fellow might be. He took a gulp of tea, and made a wry face. "American tea, my eye!" he thought. The sweet-scented atmosphere seemed to thicken. He fought off a feeling of suffocation. His fingers felt nervous. The cup slipped, banged on its edge and spilled. Hang the incense! His head was reeling.

When consciousness returned, Stacy thought for a groggy moment he was in his bunk aboard ship, awakening from a bad dream. He tried to move, and couldn't. He was bound hand and foot, face up, on some sort of a bamboo rack. He could see nothing but a damp clay ceiling and walls lightly dimmed by flickering candles. An underground room, he conjectured. He tried to raise his head and found that a band of cloth across his forehead made it impossible.

Suddenly the evil face of the curtains appeared above him. Stacy was startled, then furious. He opened his mouth to demand an explanation, then snarled it shut. He wouldn't give the enemy satisfaction.

"Where is the American cargo to be landed?" The voice was menacing.

Stacy coldly returned the man's stare.

"The American does not wish to talk!" The face moved out of sight. "What a pity!"

Something brushed against Stacy's feet. A single leaped through their bare feet. The spoke from near his feet, his voice only with insinuation. "The enemies of China have ingenious means of persuading the most reluctant. Perhaps this—"

Stacy's later was seared by something hot. Torture! Cold sweat ran down his brow. He clenched his fists.

"Perhaps the other foot," the voice sneered.

Stacy caught his breath. "Go ahead, you slant-eyed mummy!" he thought bitterly. "Main me for the triple me. Burn my feet off. You'll get nothing out of me! Not while women and children are—ohhh!"

A line of five crimsoned his eyes. Again, and again. His fingernails cut deep into his palms. Every nerve in his body ached. Through painful slitted eyes he thought he saw smog-sifting—he clamped his eyes, gritted his teeth, and tensed himself for more. But instead, miraculously, he felt something cool amass over his soles. Then fingers worked at his heels, fumbling in their haste.

Stacy struggled to sit up, furious. "Thought you could make me talk, eh?" He yanked the cloth from his forehead. "Burn my feet off, you!"

His torturer backed away. "The man's imagination is a potent force," he protested. "I assure you, the burns are merely superficial."

Stacy roared. "I saw smoke!" "Dry ice vaporizes."

"You will forgive his hands humbly. The man folded a foolish old man," he pleaded. "We dare take no chances. Our people in Shin Lee Province must not perish because of our carelessness. We had to prove, on our own way, your nervousness to us, so might you also have capitulated to the enemy. Is it not so?"

Stacy's eyes narrowed. "Say, who the devil are you?" "The parchment-like face softened. "With humility and pride I make myself known to you, courageous Sir, Checkmate."

Stacy swept the gaunt figure with belligerent eyes—unconscious—then stared, appalled, at the man's face. They were mere stumps, bound round and round with cloth. Something more than dry ice had been used there. Yet this man still dared defy his enemies.

Stacy gulped, grained sheepily, and extended an apologetic hand. "The humility is all mine, Mr. Mu. Where do we go from here?"

Stacy's scalp prickled. "Holy cow! He was being watched. Better be careful. No telling who the fellow might be. He took a gulp of tea, and made a

Nothing could express our opinion better than a short paragraph from Sweden's "Goeteborgs Posten" of September 10th. This paper from a persistently neutral country wrote:

"The Third Reich is no longer able to seize the throats of its neighbors. It will soon be lying at the feet of its enemies. The road home for German occupation troops from the Balkans will certainly pass through Allied prison-camps. Now the battle for Germany has begun. The tramp of vast Allied armies is echoing along the German frontiers. Wherever Hitler may look from his demolished workroom he sees nothing but fleeing or defeated armies. With large forces practically isolated in the Balkans, the Baltic States, Northern Finland and Norway, with many divisions in danger in Holland, Denmark and Northern Italy, Germany's position is more desperate than ever. At the time of the Armistice in 1918. There can be no doubt as to the outcome of the war. What experience have the German people of guerrilla warfare? Do the Germans believe they can imitate the fate of the oppressed peoples of Poland, Czechoslovakia, Poland and Yugoslavia? It is not surprising that many races and nations who more than five years have been labouring under Nazi yoke witness Germany's predicament without feeling any sympathy or mercy."

This short statement of Swedish opinion needs no elaboration. It is clear and to the point. For the Swedes, Germany is on her knees. Everyone else will agree with Sweden.

ENERGY FOOD

From the time the baby gets that first spoonful of solid food until the day the trunk is packed for college, cereal constituted a good part of the daily diet. Toddlers get cereal night and morning. As school children it's their energy-starter for the day. Even in their teen years they find it a good filler-upper, both in meals and in between.

Most youngsters like cereals and a lucky thing it is! Topped with either cream or milk, the morning cereal, either hot or cold, is a fine source of energy. Cereals combined with milk provide a good supply of those nutrients that children need for growth.

These cereals are smart in cooking, too. Take the matter of cookies. How the youngsters love them! Even cookies should offer food value plus flavor. Honey Krisp Cookies do both for they're made with pure country honey and crisp rice cereal.

Honey Krisp Cookies

1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup honey
2 eggs
1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped nut meats
1/2 cup chopped dates
1 teaspoon nutting oil
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 cup crisp rice cereal

Mixed shortening and honey. Add well-beaten eggs and cream. Stir flour with baking powder, salt and soda; add to first mixture. Stir in nut meats, dates, and cereal. Drop from a dessert spoon onto lightly greased baking sheet and bake moderate oven (375 degrees F.) about 20 minutes.

Yield: Two dozen cookies (4 inches in diameter).

Spies Executed

Britain's Public Prosecutor Has Been Busy During The War

The man who brought Hitler's spies in Britain to justice—16 have been executed so far—is retiring at the age of 66.

He is Sir Edward Hale Tindal Atkinson, Public Prosecutor for the last 11 years. During this war he has been one of the busiest men in Britain.

I asked Sir Edward whether he expected to continue in office long enough to be able to deal with the radio traitors, those British subjects who have broadcast for the enemy.

"No," he said. "That may be a job for my successor. I am going quite soon, on account of the age limit."

"My successor may also have a busy time over the war criminals, but I don't know what machinery will be set up for dealing with them."

"Do I regret going before the war criminals are brought to book? Yes, I think I do. They would certainly be most interesting cases."—London Daily Mail.

Concert and Theatrical Parties Are Following The Armies

The military authorities have now given permission for E.N.S.A. concert and theatrical parties to go well forward and to follow in the wake of the advancing armies. Consequently, new coming out of the line to rest are able within a few hours to enjoy the greatly varied entertainment now provided by these mobile columns of artists.

There are now 20 E.N.S.A. parties in France, organized into 12 mobile columns. All the parties, supported by well-known performers as guest artists, are taken well forward and give at least two—some have given as many as four performances a day. The women sleep in vans, the men in tents, and all have Army rations. After three weeks behind the forward lines they go back for short periods of rest at Army headquarters.

Behind the mobile entertainers, there will be performances of both vaudeville and plays in the larger theatres as they become available. Already three garrison cinemas have been opened and new films are shown simultaneously with their showing in London. Arrangements have also been made, in co-operation with the Civil Affairs Branch, for the exhibition of films in these cinemas to the civil population.

Authority has now been given to E.N.S.A. to double its forces in the Far East. Artists are already being asked to consider spending next Christmas with the troops in Burma.

All of France's art treasures, including the famous "Venus de Milo" and Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa", of the Louvre, are safe and in good condition. It has been learned authoritatively states the New York Herald Tribune. For whatever reason, the Germans left the treasure of the Louvre and most of France's great chateau museums behind them in their hurried retreat from France. Not a single painting or sculptural work of national importance is missing, it was stated by Second Lieutenant James J. Rottier, of the art and monuments division of the American Army's civil affairs section.

Mr. Anthong Eden, secretary of state for foreign affairs commented on his position freely during the interview our party had with him in

Mr. Eden stated that his impression was that throughout his history we had always refused to fight a war to impose a certain form of government on certain people. Our position had rather been that the peoples of Europe should be free to choose, and when we had gone to war it had always been because one man, or the state leadership of one man, had sought to impose this system on all Europe. That broadly was the reason we were at war now. That was accepted, not only by us but by our allies. Everyone of the exiled government had made a declaration that when they returned to their respective countries, they would at once subject themselves to the will of their people.

But it always happened that in the conduct of foreign affairs that people agreed easily about a principle, but the moment an attempt was made to apply the principle the authorities said that the principle was not being applied correctly. He was not interested at this comment in the politics of Marshall Tito of Yugoslavia. During a war foreign policy and the activities of armies in the field could not be separated; they were all one. The Tito armies were encouraging German divisions. These were the only principles that could be adopted and if we departed from them manifold difficulties would arise.

He said that Mr. Churchill had stated that he and Marshal Stalin agreed upon the need for Poland to obtain compensation at the expense of Germany, both in the north and west. Some people speak a little as if the position in this part of Europe now bore some parallel to the position at the outbreak of the war. An

In regard to foreign policy in general, Mr. Eden said that he made no secret of the objectives which they set themselves. The maintenance of peace when this conflict was over would depend on a close and intimate understanding between the nations of the British Commonwealth, the United States, and the Soviet Union. If they could achieve that understanding then all their problems, however difficult could be resolved. If they could not achieve it there was, in his judgement no hope of lasting peace.

He was not to be taken as meaning that any one of the three had any justification for ignoring the rights of small nations—each people had a claim to its own life—but unless those three could reach a common understanding and accept common principles for the guidance of their foreign policy all nations, great and small, were going to suffer.

There were many difficulties in reaching even a broad basis of understanding, and still more when they came to apply that basis in the practice of parallel foreign policy. Geography, imposed some very stern limitations. All three of these great powers, and China, were fundamentally interested in the preservation of lasting peace. He was pleased when he saw the United States interested in world affairs. Even if they argued and disagreed it was infinitely to be preferred to the United States not taking such an interest. Equally with our other great ally, it would not be to the lasting advantage of the peace of Europe that Russia should retire in to isolation.

He stated definitely that there was no foundation for the suspicion held by some that at Teheran or Moscow we had committed ourselves to limit or exclude our interest in certain parts of Europe. We had not agreed to any spheres of influence, we had not been asked to agree; we had not accepted no barriers, we had not been asked to accept any. We were absolutely free to interest ourselves in the affairs of all nations of Europe and no spheres of influence had been agreed to by anyone.

Europe in the last 20 years has suffered deeply. Our daily task, Mr. Eden said, was going to be infinitely harder than after the last war. We would strive to use all our influence and authority to bring about friendship between allies when the future continuance of peace. We would use whatever influence we had so that Europe might regain its corporate life, and so that its individual nations might regain their individual life. That was the policy of the British government was engaged. He could promise this in the face of all the difficulties, disappointment, much deception, in the times that lay ahead. He did not remember any period when foreign policy was so difficult as it was now. We would use all our strength to pursue the objectives he had mentioned, and he trusted that we might not fail.
